

Malta Bowling Association signs 2-year kit deal with Trident

The Malta Bowling Association has signed a 2-year deal with the bowling apparel company Trident for them to be the official suppliers of the MBA's national squad.

For the first time in its history, the Malta Bowling Association has struck a long-term deal to have an official supplier for its national squads. The growing Italian company named "Trident Bowling Apparel" (often shortened to "Trident") has been entrusted to supply all national teams' gear for the next two years; this includes bags, jackets, shirts, and other accessories.

With this announcement, the MBA also unveiled the new design of their national kits together with representatives from Trident, the president of the MBA, Edward Mifsud, and the full national squads for Team Malta's next two international competitions – the European Championship of Champions 2022 (ECC) and the European Senior Championships (ESC 2023).

Kenneth Arpa, Sue Abela, and Cynthia Frendo Duca will use the kits for the first time at the ECC 2022 taking place next week at the end of October. The spotlight in Olomouc, Czech Republic will undoubtedly be on Sue Abela, as she will try to retain her ECC championship from last year as the defending female European champion. The ECC are a type of European championships for bowling in which only the national champions (for both males and females) of each European country are invited to compete.

The other bowlers pictured were the men for the ESC 2023 squad: Dennis Mercieca, Mark Spiteri, Kenneth Arpa again, and Joe Cassar.
